About Heritage Hats

Since 1983, Heritage Hats has been Arizona's largest hat store, offering western, fedora, Panama, Australian, and more. What started as selling hats from a pickup at rodeos grew into a 3,200 sq. ft. shop with two showrooms and an on-site restoration workshop.

We honor time-tested craftsmanship with original 1912 equipment, custom hat-making, and expert cleaning and blocking — serving everyone from local cowboys to legends like Ronald Reagan and George Burns.

Issues Found:

- Navigation menu text overlaps logo.
- Hero title “Heritage Hats” is too large and partially cut off.
- About section image and text stack unevenly with inconsistent padding.
- Product section cards are squeezed vertically, with images stuck together and too much scroll space.
- Review cards are oversized on smaller screens.
- Contact map and info appear cramped and overlap on mobile.

For the navigation, the text was overlapping the logo on smaller screens. A responsive media query was added to adjust the layout, using flex-direction: column and align-items: center. A simple hamburger menu was also introduced for mobile. As a result, the navigation now stacks properly, remains centered, and looks clean on all devices.

In the hero section, the title text appeared too large and was being cropped on smaller screens. The heading font sizes were adjusted to 5rem for tablets and 3rem for mobile devices. This ensures that the title fits neatly within the hero image across all screen sizes.

The about section had uneven spacing between the text and image. Padding was reduced and the layout was switched to a single-column format under 768px, creating a cleaner stacked design without awkward gaps or empty space.

In the products section, the cards were stacking awkwardly and product images were sticking together. CSS was refined by adding spacing (gap: 25px, margin-right: 20px) and applying consistent object-fit: cover styling. This resulted in evenly spaced, well-proportioned product cards.

For the reviews section, the cards were too large on smaller screens. Padding and image sizes were reduced, and hover transitions using transform and background-color were added. The cards are now evenly sized and are readable.

Lastly, in the contact section, the map and text were overlapping. The layout was fixed by applying flex-direction: column and centering the text, ensuring that the contact form, info, and map now display neatly in a stacked vertical arrangement on mobile.

Conclusion:

After applying responsive CSS adjustments, my Heritage Hats site now displays correctly across mobile and tablet screens. Text is readable, images scale properly, and sections align cleanly. Navigation and contact sections are especially improved for usability.
